BALTIMORE—A robot that roams halls and offices is giving the litters to scientists at the Johns Hopkins University applied physics laboratory.

The 100-pound robot, dubbed The Beast, sends staff members scurrying to slam their doors when they hear its buzzing approach lest it pop into their offices.

The robot, which looks like a huge hatbox on wheels, the only one in the world that can survive in a mase of corridors and offices.

When its 12 silver badmium batteries start to run down,

The Beast feels its way along a corridor until it finds an electrical outlet. Then the robot inserts two prongs into the outlet and recharges the batteries. Then it pulls out the prongs and moves on.

machine sleers itself by using its arm and micro switches built into its wrap-around bumper to feel its way along corridors cluttered with soft-drink machines, stair wells, office doors and people.

Occasionally, its arm gets caught in a stair railing or an electrical cord and has to extricate itself.

The robot moves back and forth, shaking its arm to disentangle it. If that doesn't work, it does a pirouette. If it is still caught, it tries backing straight away. With built-in persistence, it keeps wiggling until it is free. Soon, Hopkins' scientists will equip The Beast with an echo-ranging device so it can roll straight down hallways and an electric eye for spotting wall plugs.

His bitter General MacArthur's fellow comments on President Truman and several military colleagues come poorly from a man who is now exalted to national greatness. The cruel words and the glorified character, the mean thoughts and the heroic stature of the man do not harmonize. These ill - natured insults form a poor epitaph for a notable career. They are more em-barrassing to General MacArthur's friends than to his enemies.

One is left hoping that someone will now prove the quotations to have been contrived or misinterpreted. They do not fit and they are not fitting. There can only be regret that they have risen from the past to mar the present, and hope that they will be forgotten in the future.

Where They're Biting

WHILE CANADA CONTINUES w its hoping and planning for the establishment of a 12-mile limit, the world fishing picture takes on significant brush-strokes

In New Zealand the other day the authorities found it necessary to protest diplomatically to Japan against the intrusion of a "mother" ship servicing five line-fishing boats in the New Zealand waters of the Bay of Pienty. The protest brought a warning from Tokyo to the offending vessel that any similar breach would result in a recall of the fishing craft to Japan.

The incident, coupled with the intensified fishing of waters off New Zealand by Japanese has stirred new interest on the part of the Commonwealth country in Canada's plans for a 12-mile limit and similar action by Britain. The assumption is that New Zealand will follow the lead of her senior Commonwealth partners.

But this, in itself, will not solve the fisheries problem as it con-cerns the world in general and the world's top fishing nation, Japan.

Japan is fishing more in the vicinity of New Zealand, in part, because she seeks new grounds to compensate for loss of fishing rights in the region adjoining the Kuriles and Sakhalin, closed to her by the Soviet Union. This, in turn, could lead to a stiffening of Japanese resistance against efforts by Canada and the United States to maintain the "abstention" principle in fishing agreements with Japan and possibly the Soviet Union. By that principle the Japanese, under the now expired North Pacific pact, agreed to keep fishermen away from high seas salmon fisheries which one or the other, or both, North American participants in the convention were fishing to the limits of sane exploitation.

Japan, of course, has probably greater vested interest in the preservation of fish species than any other nation, since she has the

Mr. Knowles Plays the Red Queen

IN a most unusual act of massive retaliation-frankly aimed at Senator Grattan O'Leary—Mr. Stanley Knowles on Monday intro-duced his bill to abolish the Senate of Canada. It was Mr. O'Leary who last Fri-day delayed the passage of an appropria-tions bill, thereby infuriating the NDP and bringing various editors to the verge of hysteria. The Knowles bill many years.

Even if the senator was guilty as charged, it seems extraordinary that the New Democrats should propose as a fitting retribution the elimination of the entire Upper House.

What he actually did was to insist on the observance of the Senate rules. In the normal way a bill does not pass through all three readings on the same day. If it is to do so (either in the House or the Senate) the rules have to be waived by unanimous consent, Senator O'Leary refused unani-mous consent, Mr. Knowles has frequently had problems with two of his own colleagues, Messrs. Howard and Peters, who make a habit of doing in the House what Mr. O'Leary did in the a good deal of inconvenience. The government, and the House, wanted the bill to be rushed through for royal assent. But it was not the Senate which created this difficulty. There can be no appropriation bill until the estimates

The estimates were not passed until Friday, partly because the government mismanaged its business and partly because members of the Commons-including, most conspicuously, NDP members—insisted upon a protracted examination of the estimates.

Meanwhile, the Senate kept assem bling only to adjourn because there was, nothing for it to do. Mr. O'Leary com-plained bitterly that the Senators were treated like messenger being Many of his colleagues felt that this was a reasonably accurate summation.

Mr. Knowles, who feels otherwise, stated on Monday that the aim of his bill is "to remove the possibility of the legislation enacted by the elected repre-sentatives being interfered with or delayed by a body of persons which has no mandate from the people of this country.

The Senate did not interfere with the appropriations bill. What it did was to impose a delay from Friday to Monday—quite enough to cause Mr. Knowles, like the Red Queen, to cry, "off with its head."

is an imperfect and highly controver-sial body. Its composition and powers are often criticized by constitutional writers. But there has always been fairly general agreement on one point. While the Senate ought not to be able to block legislation from the Commons, it was intended to be a chamber of "sober, second thought" and it should, therefore, have the power of imposing

Sir John A. MacDonald said: "It must be an independent House, having a free action of its own, for it is only valuable as being a regulating body, calmly considering the legislation initiated by the popular branch, and preventing any hasty or ill-considered legislation which may come from that body, but it will never set itself in opposition against the deliberate and understood wishes of the people."

In this case it has not set itself in opposition to anybody. It has calmly considered from Friday to Monday, which is apparently regarded by the NDP as an intolerable affront to the House of Commons.

Senator O'Leary, repenting nothing, ade his personal defence on Monday, was interesting to observe that his audience included some 27 members of the press gallery and numerous MPs. The proceedings of the House at that hour were dutifully covered by two reporters.

closer to agricultural production will be given more authority.

By this means it may be possible to earmark acreage for its appropriate yield. "Planning," says Izvestia, "will be from below."

This is a swing toward businesslike management from the traditional Soviet and Russian methods.

There is, however, one factor which will be noted. To a very great extent some of the more pro-ductive Russian land has been 'mined" and only recently has the state decreed its replenishment with more fertilizer. The success or otherwise of the proposed new approach will be watched with some interest in Canada. Crop failures in Communist lands, lamentable as they are in principle wherever they happen, have pushed an appreciable amount of business toward this country. And Canadians are and presumably always will be in the grain exporting business.

ON THE WHITE PAPER

The Case for a Canadian Defence Council

been drawn to the great dangers inith absolute authority over all other officers, alone responsible to the government on all functions of our defence services and chief adviser to the govern-the current white paper on defence.

History has repeatedly illustrated the fallacy of granting such sweeping powers to any single indivilual. In place of this arrangement it is strongly advocated that this function be carried out by a der. These officers, though they migh defence council of senior officers, representing not the three distinct branch the service but rather the three functions in defence-i.e. operations, supply and administration (of all three services).

The clearest arguments against the "commander-in-chief" principle are per-haps set forth in Britain in the Esher report of 1904. Although the Esher commission dealt primarily with army or ganization alone, the same principles of organization are just as valid today in the projected unified defence force for Canada. Some of the relevant views of the Esher report might well be reviewed, Principal Weakness

The principal administrative weakness uncovered by the Esher co in its examination of the War Ofifce con-cerned the role of the army's commander in-chief, to whom all other senior officers ports will not be increased as part were responsible. The committee found a tendency among top army officers to "shelter themselves behind the commander-in-chief" and to "impute to the secretary of state for the war (minister) the responsibility for decisions of which they disapprove."

was evidence that the com There mander-in-chief relied for advice upon individuals whose habits of thought vere identical to his own. The army was run by a cabal of like-thinking generals and "yes men."

More distressing, the committee found was the effect which this arrangement had on the relationship between the army commander and his minister. As the transient political head of the War Office, the minister was presumably the senior authority and the commander his expert adviser.

Inevitably Destructive

The minister, however, had no other persons to whom to turn for expert military advice. He accepted or rejected the recommendations of the commander-in-chief. If he agreed with his adviser, the minister risked becoming a mere mouthplece of the commander; if he bination of music and flowers which for the arrangement of musical mouthpiece of the commander; if he added a distinctive touch to enter- treats in unsurpassed surroundings.

Each took his orders, not from the CIGS, but from the army council.

Group Advice

"The council also served to eliminate the difficult and mutually destructive relationship between the minister and the commander-in-chief. The minister no longer relied on a single officer for advice on such widely varying subjects as en-gineering, victualling, and military justice. He drew on the advice of a group

Yet they were ticipate as a working member of the council, as well as his deputy and posherent in the appointment of a single with the final authority and the ex-commander in chief (chief of defence), perienced commander with the military the historic policy of firm civilian contraining, performing the same task. One trol over the armed forces with direct responsibility to the cabinet is reaffirmed. The most important change effected Lord Haldane, secretary of state for war by the Esher report was the elimination at the time of the Esher report, warned of military independence from Parliament, through establishment of the commander-in-chief principle.

Decisive

In recent years, no single body, com-mittee or council has been specifically charged with the direct responsibility of formulating our national defence policy, unbelievable as that may seem. Under a properly constituted defence council, as called for above, this situation would end. Instead of merely advising, "buckpassing" and debating, the committee would have to make decisions and be held responsible for them.

Depending on the future organization of civil defence (and the emergency measures organization), a strong case might also be made for the federal civil defence director having at least a parttime voice on a defence council in Canada.

People In Need

The recent disastrous tidal wave on the West Coast of Vancouver Island wiped out 16 of the 18 homes at Hot Springs Cove, an Indian settlement on Flores Island. These people now need help, and lots of it and I firmly believe it can be forthcoming.

I have therefore written to the two major lumber companies of B.C. and to several other large firms dealing in building supplies and fixtures with the hope that they will contribute enough materials to replace the Indians' houses. The Indian men are good carpenters and could go ahead on their own once the materials were provided.

I feel that this is a very worthy project to help people in great need and would be glad of the moral support of your readers.

The Big April Fool

The ten-cent "April fool" for the residents of Victoria is a shock, after all the headlines stating "Power Rates Cut."

How long will the taxpayer continue to believe in the Social Credit promises and this system of bookkeeping? But wait citizens! You've got the Columbia and the Peace, and the damcites busting at the seams, and the floods, etc. Yes, we'll have real power ... "the cheapest in the world" ... so says our powerful Premier.

"BOBBY."

Devout Objection

It seems to me that the subject over which some of us may have been rather confused in our thinking is with regard to the practice of having the Scriptures read in the public schools.

Some are inclined to think that it is mainly the infidels and such like who are opposed to Scripture reading in the public schools. But perhaps the great majority of those who are opposed are staunch Bible believers—people who see the precarious situation existing in permitting the Bible reading (even without comment) in the state supported schools. Should not the government be neutral and while protecting all, prefer none and disparage none? Even the question of merely choosing the version from which to read would be difficult without showing preference.

One prominent leader said: "The breach of neutrality that is today a trickling stream may all too soon become a raging torrent." Is it not proper to take alarm as we see the trend of events?

Quebec L'Evenement-

The establishment of a pension fund isn't going to be a current event if one can judge by the statements of Premiers Jean Lesage and John Robarts at the federal-provincial conference. There is no doubt that the federal government will find itself faced with a grave problem if Quebec and Ontario both decide to establish their own plans and refuse to collaborate with Ot A uniquely provincial pension fund, functioning solely in our provivnce, will require a large staff and prove costly. Everything connected with social security concerns all governments and a further effort ought to be made to bring about unanimity in this field.

The federal government and the provinces will always have to try to agree on collaboration in sectors where their responsibilities or jurisdictions overlap.

Letter and Spirit

REPORTS FROM WASHING-ton give a hopeful indication that President Johnson plans to stick firmly to the letter and spirit of the intentions of his predecessor regarding the coming "Kennedy Round" bargaining over tariffs.

The president's key move, observers say, was made when American lead and zinc producers started a lobby for legislation to reduce imports of the two metals. President Johnson acted quickly when he heard about the move and lighted a "backfire" by asking the Tariff Commission to investigate what would happen if all existing protection for lead and zinc were removed.

Equally unsuccessful in efforts to seek greater protection against foreign imports, apparently, have been coal and oil producers who can gain no assurance from the White House that residual oil imof the bargaining.

Textile producers, who had hoped that their products would be removed entirely from the bargaining table, have abandoned hope of such an eventuality and are reportedly expecting to have to share more of the domestic market with imports. Proponents of freer trade are therefore reassured that the "Kennedy Round" is still an active project with President Johnson.

INSIDE POLITICS

With Douglas Fisher, M.P.

The flag issue bubbles higher. Two Tory MPs, Bob Coates (N.S.) and Bob Ormiston (Sask.) whip up Red Ensign enthusiasm. Every Legion branch and command seems to lobbying by letter for the Ensign. Bags of Ensign fan mail come in. If some of us who want something different do not start pushing some alternative, the Red Ensign may win. That is why I give you extracts from a long delightful letter on our flag problem. I hope many of you will be captivated by the suggestions. The letter's author is a serving officer.

There is one unsaid thing in favor of the Red Ensign's use in this country. It is not a result of British conquest in 1759, but of Pierre Raddisson's search for justice in 1670. He planted the Red Ensign so firmly in this country that before Confederation it waved from Labrador to the edges of Alaska and

On the other hand, it was and is a merchant's flag, suitable for the Bay, Eatons, and Simpsons-Sears, but a breach of protocol when flown above government and military establishments. The Legion bases its entire argument on one document—a cartoon from Punch. If it is proper to fly a Red Ensign on army camps or to paint it on the fins of RCAF war planes, then it should also replace the White Ensign on RCN ships and planes. (That ought to start a rhubarb in nany a Legion post.)

Flag Not a Fetish

A flag is an identification rather than a shrine or fetish at which to worship one's ancestors. The Red Ensign is too much like many other flags: viewed from enough distance it even resembles that of Red China or the U.S.S.R. More closely viewed it can be mistaken for the other China's or Burma's. Two members of the Commonwealth deliberately use the Blue Ensign improperly to avoid confusion-but with the southern cross in the fly.

Have you driven south to Florida and felt good to see billboard-sized red ensigns on the roadside, only to read them advertising the Nassau Ferry? Then there are the faded oink ensigns whipping in the wind on Highway 11 through the Muskokas. One must concentrate to distinguish them from the Stars and Stripes flying alongside them.

The Union Jack in the ensign which people wish to preserve is not blameless. The first two crosses are authentic but the third, St. Patrick's, is a fraud. It is neither Irish nor has it anything to do with St. Pat. It is the colors of St. George's Cross in the the English and Scottish settlers sent to replace the Irish who were driven out of their homes. If the design was previously found in Ireland, it must have been salvaged from wrecks of the Spanish armada and kept out of Irish spite. The armada flew a white posed of the crossed thunderbolts of Santa Barbara, patron of gunners. The States of Florida and Alabama have flaga derived from that Spanish ensign, although Alabama now calls it St. Andrew's

Stunted Maples

All that is not to suggest I favor the pen-nant of La Ligue du Drapeau Nationale, alias Native Sons. Neither "England's cruel red" nor the white flag of cowardice intrigue me. Also, coming from north of the 49th parallel, where maple trees are shorter than a species of cranberry bush, the maple leaf in either color is a foreign emblem; an im-port from Vermont and New York by U.E. Loyalists. I believe there are as many states whose emblem is the maple as there are provinces in Canada. While Quebec produces more maple syrup than all the U.S.A., it is all second grade to the Vermont variety. Even in furniture, the maple used comes from the southern states. Canadian maple is good for firewood and Torontonians to sing their civic anthem about. Even the maple trees decorating the grounds of Government House are imports from the U.S.A.

An emblem for this country, and its flag, and seal, and maybe some day its coat of arms? Why not the bird that bears the -branta canadensis?

As for a flag—one that identifies, that stands for something—this country must have colors representing the land, not the languages. Foreigners think this is a land of forests, snow, and green fields. We know our land is one of agriculture, basic industry, and precious minerals. Everyone knows it stretches from sea to sea. So there are the colors—in proper heraldic sequence, gold, green, and argent, with a band of ultraarine on each end.

Added Distinction

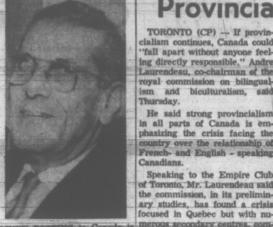

For added distinction, I'd blazon the brant (or goose) centrally, facing sinister, with wing tips dipped. Such a flag represents the entire nation from the far north to the Great Lakes, from shore to shore. Such an emblem represents our whole geography and our national character—non-predatory, traveller, minds own business, and fights like the devil when attacked.

As Marc Antony is blamed for having said: "Now let it work-take thou whatever attention. Some of the annuals which benefit from the pinching out of the growing tip are snapdragons sweet peas, schizanthus (the Butterfly-flower or Poor-Man's-Orchid), carnations, asters, and bedding dahlias

All of these will ultimately branch out if left to their own devices, but in most cases only after the central flower has grown, blossomed, faded, and been cut off. Allowing this to happen delays the resumption of flowering and also limits the display of blooms from a plant at any one period.

If the growing tip is pinched out after two sets of leaves have opened, side growths immediately begin to move ahead to make up for the loss of that

More flowers will be out at the same time, and the plant's spread will be increased by the overage of the side bran thus formed.

If already past the two-leaf stage and looking too leggy for their own good, it would be wise to pinch these annuals back at nce to about half their height Try to give them more direct light if that has been the cause of legginess. New side growths should soon be in evidence.

The normally low growing an-uals such as the bush lobelia, ageratum, petunia, viscaria and tagetes do not need pinching to induce bushiness, for side growths are freely formed as n inherited habit

He ruled in favor of an appeal by Joseph Bouffard, who was fined $125 and placed on the interdict list by Magistrate Alfred Watts in West Vancouver after he found Bouffard guilty of impaired delicing.

Magistrate Aired Watts in West Vancouver after ne found Bouffard guilty of impaired driving.

Bouffard appealed the interdiction part of his sentence, but not the $125 fine or his conviction.

Lawyer William Craig argued that the Criminal Code of Canada, under which the impaired charge was laid, makes no provision for the use of interdiction as part of a sentence. part of a sentence.

CHEVELLE by Chevrolet it's got young ideas about size, style and power

It's fun to drive a car with young ideas. Even more enjoyable when it's a brand-new Chevelle by Chevrolet. Because then you're driving a car with youthful styling and frisky performance plus the traditional dependability and value that is so typically Chevrolet.

Chevelle's sociable size makes it especially appealing. Shorter than big cars, so it's easy to handle and park. But that's hard to tell from the inside, because there's so much comfort for people and so much luggage space. Like all Chevrolets, Chevelle will climb a hill or pass on a highway with power to spare. Any one of Chevelle's thirteen power teams makes sure of that. All this in a choice of eleven great models.

Now's a wonderful time to test drive a Chevelle. You'll most likely get young ideas yourself and who can blame you? Not your Chevrolet dealer. See him.

NOTHING! Spalding has been using wood to create the world's finest clubs for 68 years. Then why did Spalding spend six years looking for something better? Because the Spalding research staff is never satisfied. Could they discover something better than wood?

They did. It's called "Poly-Powered" wood.

Poly-Powered wood is a new synthetic compound that is 35% harder than the wood commonly used for wood-headed clubs. It won't warp, chip, crack, scratch or fade. It will keep its smooth, molded shape.

And, if you want to improve your hitting power, Poly-Powered woods are the next best thing to spending all your time on the course.

Drop into your favourite sporting goods store. Get a grip on a new Spalding Poly-Powered 'woodless wood". One test swing will show you why good woods don't have to be made from wood anymore.

'Lion of Kashmir' Set Free by India

NEW DELHI (AP)-Sheik Mo- Abdullah, the "Lion of Kashhammed Abdullah, Moslem leader of the independence movement in Kashmir state, was set free today after 11 years imprisonment by Prime Minister Nehru's government.

Abdullah, Moslem mir" who had been prime minister of the state until Nehru in tegrated it into India, was removed in the town of Jammu, in the southwestern section of Kashmir, the government radio said.

Also set free were 13 other men arrested in 1953 on charges that they worked to break the state away from India and join it with Moslem Pakistan or to form an independent state.

A huge cheering crowd wel-comed the 14 freed men, throwing garlands around their necks and shouting "long live Moslem-Hindu unity," the radio said. Abdullah stayed in jail nine years before he was brought to trial. The trial dragged on inconclusively and Abdullah's case became a cause around which neighboring Pakistan and dis-satisfied elements within Kashmir rallied.

The Indian government an-nounced April 1 the charges against the imprisoned nationalists would be dropped and that they would be released to "sta-bilize" the tense political situation in Kashmir. Nehru is thought to have obtained a firm guarantee from Abdullah that the nationalists will not resume their agitation against India. Nehru has invited Abdullah to visit him in New

Capitol Theatre

And if you can imagine Doug las Fairbands, Sr., in the role of a wolf, it would be Lobo. Just as the Fairbanks of old galloped to the rescue of his current which might have turned the head of a lesser wolf. Not so Lobo. Today he is back in the old routine of greeting customers at the pet park while his screen performs heroic deeds in the movie theatres of Victoria, San Francisco, Los Angeles, London, Paris, Vienna, Toyko-or almost anywhere in the civilized world.

Lobo is undoubtedly a credit to Victoria. He is a born actor and a handsome one and his graceful torso—seen at its best in the swift leap from crag to in the mourtain of the hole-in-the-hill dens used by ordinary wolves, discovers an abandoned cliff dwelling high in the mountains of Arizons. To reach it he and his mate, Sombra, have to cross a mile-high chasmi bridged by a fallen treation of the civilized world.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the West Book Encyclopedia to Philip Di Menno, age 12, of Bridgeport, Conn., for his question:

What are diatoms?

Countless tons of diatoms swarm in the fresh waters and salt waters of the world. Countless tons of their ancestors teemed in the ancient seas millions of years ago. We did not know about them until after the microscope was invented, for most diatoms are too small for the human eye to see.

The living diatom is a single-celled plant. It contains a supply of green chlorophyl for making plant food from water, carbon dioxide and sunlight. In many diatoms, the green is masked with yellow or brown. The living plant cell is encased in a pair of glassy shells fitted together like a box with a closed lid.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

Pay-television could destroy television as it is Favour today.

This is the opinion of Leroy Collins, president of the U.S. National Association of Broadcasters, in his annual report to the N.A.B. in Chicago this week.

Collins said the association resident of home Day. TV

jetts the concept of home pay TV and will continue to do so until it is convinced the U.S. public wants pay TV as a replacement for free

The appearance of Nat (King) Cole on a recent Hollywood Palace show has stirred up inquiries as to why he doesn't have his own regular television

The man many consider the greatest ballad singer in the business will play a three-night stand Vancouver next week.

In 1957, Cole had one of the best variety pro-

American circles, this year he has had more TV offers than he can full. The same holds true for Cole says the offers from TV and movies these days are for straight parts—parts that formerly went only to whites. In his last movie, he played W. C. Handy, the father of the blues.

It is sincerely hoped he will accept any or all offers. His is a style, though dated by modern conceptions of popular music, which is refreshing and deserving of wide audiences through the medium of reserving of wate audiciares and a television.
